In the greenest growth of the maytime,
I Rode where the woods were wet,
Between the Dawn and the daytime
The spring was glad that we met

There was something the season wanted though the woods and the ways smelled sweet

The breath of your lips that panted
The pulse of the grass at your feet.

You came and the sun came after and the green grew golden; Above and the flowers lightend with laughter and the meadows shook sweet with lov

your feet in the full grown grasses moved soft as the weak wind blows.
you passed me as April passes with a face made out of a Rose

By the stream where the stems were steady, your bright foot paused at the edge
It might be to watch the tender
Bright leaves in the spring time hedge

Oh Bough that the sweet months blanches with the flowery fresh May
It might be a bird in the branches
It might be a thorn in the way

VOLUME FOUR
FRANK W. COX HIGH SCHOOL
VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA

I waited to watch you linger with foot drawn back from the dew
Mill a sunbeam
Straight like a finger
Struck sharp through at you.

Placid pools recline in lazy luxury to fool the eye that sees it, shallow, still. Beneath the glassy mirror which reflects the shore that forms its course, shadows quietly move and bubbles forming ripples here and there whisper of the unseen life below. Sleepy, flowing like a dream without motion or design, the water hides its power behind its calm; it is not dead or stagnant, only stored away in silence. A breath of air skims the surface but cannot alter or disturb the gravity of the depths, the secret force. Suddenly every latent current beats with vibrant energy, awake, alive, and strong. The unnatural mask of false tranquility is shattered by the thrashing of the waves yielding to the impulse of the wind. Freedom and momentum rule the seas; the roaring crescendo of its turbulence fills the air as its power surges forth on dual waves of liquid sound. Breakwaters and jetties strain and are swept away by the relentless, driving force of nature's phenomenal giant.

The sluggish streams of unmotivated learning and the monotonous conformity of student life breed scum to check the progress of our knowledge and the advance of our school. But still, beneath the surface, unseen, unheard, flow the sources of potential, the dormant swells of genius and leadership. An impetus—a word, an idea, or a goal—and we are lifted out of the doldrums to the crest of the waves. The unrestrainable power throbs beneath us as it bears us onward. School spirit, interest, enthusiasm rush into the dry locks of our school to elevate it perpetually to higher and higher levels. As still waters we reflect the influences of those who teach and guide our course among the streams of thought. As the boundless oceans we surge endlessly forward to explore and conquer the infinite reaches of our works and our own being.

A bird overhead sang "follow"
a bird to the right sang "here"
And the arch of the of the leaves was hollow and the meaning of may was clear

Laura,
It has been really great knowing you for the past two years.
You are one of the sweetest people I know.
May God bless and keep you.
Love Ya,
Kathy

I saw where the suns hand ponted
I know what the birds note said
By the dawn and the dewfall annointed you were queen by the gold on your head

As the glimpse of a burnt outember
Recalls the regret of the sun
I remember, forget, and Remember what love saw done and undone

I Rember the way we Ported, the day and [illegible] we met.
you hoped [illegible] re both brokenhearte and knew we should both forget.

and may with her world of flower seemed still to murmur and smile
as you murmored and smiled for an hour
I saw you turn at the stile

A hand like the white wood blossom you lifted and waved as passed with head hung down on the bosom and pale, as it seemed, at last.

And the best and the worst of it is that neither is most to blame
If you've forgotten my kisses
And I've forgotten my name

GO FALCONS!

Dear Laura,

Some day I would like to tell you how much I love you but you'll just have to wait, the English vocabulary is not large enough to contain it.

Laura,

I will always remember you because of Busty. (I don't know if you care for that or not —)

It's been a pleasure knowing you this year.

I hope we'll see each other later in life!

Best of luck and much happiness next year + for the future!!

A friend,
Joanne K. '66

Well, you've finished the long haul. All fourteen years of it. No you either pay for four more, or get a job, or something. By now, though, I guess you're pretty fed up with homework and teachers. Well, whatever you do remain the sweet, friendly girl you are now and remember: Keep Smiling. Lotsa luck.

Steve Ambrose

Administration And Faculty

Principal

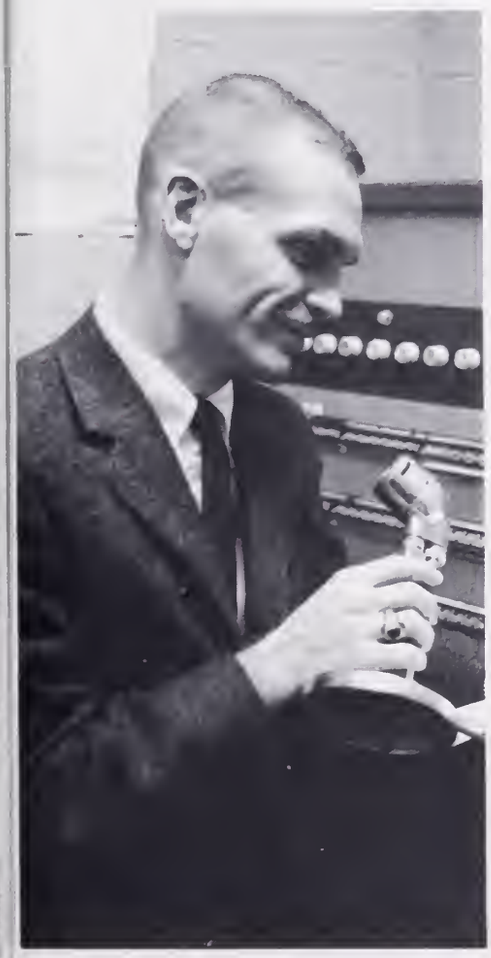
Walter N. Carroll

Heoding the odministrotion of Cox High School, with wisdom to guide both students ond foculty alike is our principol, Mr. Corroll. His work resulted in ochievement ond success. His concern ond realizotion of the volue of extrocurriculor octivities, both clubs and sports, not to mention the stress placed on ocodemic achievement provided the essentiol port for the development of o well-rounded student body.

Assistant Principal

James W. French

Like o mon of mony faces, mony sides, Mr. French hos been octive in so mony oreas of school life thot only very new students ore not ocquointed with him. At home on the edge of the field, booming over the loud speoker, or in his present position as assistont principol, Mr. French is o study in versotility. He has the responsibilities of supervising D.E., coordinoting tronsportotion, and handling senior discipline.



Administrative Asst.

Alfred B. Bulla

With his mild monner ond soft voice Mr. Bulla is the Cox version of the "big stick" policy. Known to mony geogrophy ond sociol studies students os an excellent teocher, he now fills the chollenging position of administrative ossistant, which meons disciplinorian or executive truont officer. He is always well-ormed with on oir of cheerfulness and cooperation.

Student Activities Dir.

Jerry F. Deviney

Mr. Jerry Deviney, olios "Slithery D.," took over the reins os director of student octivities, inheriting the grove responsibility of riding herd on 2,000 students lost September. Alwoys on the telephone, worrying, plonning, odvising, o n d choperoning, besides teoching English ond Internotional Relotions, Mr. Deviney wos liked ond respected by oll. He led the student body in on outstanding year.

Guidance Department Expands to Meet Demands of Growing Student Body

With two thousand students to cope with, the guidance department had to expand its headquarters and broaden the scope of its program. The organization of students' schedules, their ability to graduate by allowing for the minimum number of credits, their advance preparation for college, scheduling tests, handling scholarship information formed quite a heavy load for the counselors aside from their primary job of personal or group counseling and keeping in close touch with the students. Providing military information, so important in this new age of the nearing-universal draft, and co-sponsoring such important and worthwhile events as Career Night, College Night, and the teen-age Christmas drive through the work of the guidance committee pack their already full schedules even fuller as do students who fail to make up their mind about what courses to take until the middle of the semester and, as does the titanic task of stretching too few rooms or teachers to provide the courses that the students need and want. Always typing forms, checking records, evaluating, improving procedures, reaching out to advise and help, the guidance counselors form the vital core of every student's life at Cox.

There are many things a student cannot escape—exams, report cards, term papers, ond English. On every side the rules, exceptions, spelling, definitions, voices, tenses, and usoge, frame the impressive, monstrous structure of language that puzzles the imogination and reason, soys "because" to "why?", ond hems individual thought and expression within a prison of grammatical low, or so it seems. Actually this sometimes interesting, alwoys challenging, often dull fromework provides the basis for the discovery of on infinite realm of thought ond feeling in the literature of the English-speaking people of the world. The ponoroma of American and English literature was presented in introductory sketches to the underclassmen ond in their wide, inclusive scopes to juniors and seniors respectively. The honors courses tought, along with advanced curriculum, the intangibles of application, discussion, and the greot ort of thinking. They were often run on the seminor theory where student participation was of the greatest importance. World Literature, around which o paradox of contradictory rumors and grumbles continually whirls, extended the interest ond understanding of the students to the writings of the literory masters of other countries. The art of self-expression was cultivated behind the podium in speech classes, on stage in the make-believe reolism of drama and dromotic technique in the droma closses, ond in the creative exercises and octivities of Advonced Composition.

International Relations Sheds Light On World Developments

Our present day way of life came about because of a gradual shifting of the sands of time. Up through the ages we have progressed from the primitive existence of cave to the sometimes almost excrutiatingly complex society that surrounds us today. Social Studies is the study of relationships. It is the association between man and the forces of environment that surround him, of both the past and the present, and their effects on our future. Working from the ground up, geography presents the land with all its interesting deviations of climate, vegetation, rainfall, and terrain. The result was a variety of unique societies, each with something to offer future generations in the world history. With this basic knowledge emphasis is put on a comprehensive study of American history, our government, and our international relations. Sociology wraps it up with a serious look at the major social problems of our time to become well adjusted individuals.

Language Labs Aid First Year Students

To say, ta think, ta knaw, and to understand the saunds and structure af a fareign language is a difficult task. The gaal af the language department is ta help students reach this peak. Instructian was offered this year in Latin, French, German, and Spanish. The language labs were especially helpful in tuning the ear of the first year students ta carrect pranunciation. The histary af the countries and the grammar af the languages were caardinated to make them mare relevant and alive to the students.

Mr. Waters demonstrates the techniques of the language lab to his first year students.

Students enjoy a quiet study period in the library. Here they can find references for their research papers and a place where no one will interrupt their train of thought.

Mrs. Lang and her assistant Miss Wainwright file cards in the book check-out area.

Library Provides Study Haven

There is a quiet place at Cox, good for studying and taking tests, great for research and reading, and commonly referred to as the library. Although the library has been deficient in the number of books compared to the number of students in the very recent past and could still use many more volumes, clubs and organizations have donated books as service projects, books have been purchased in large numbers by the library, so that this year the number of books was sufficient to meet the requirements of the Southern Conference for Cox's accreditation. The library provides and stores the visual aid equipment so useful to teachers. The strict rules and regulations concerning access to the library and checking out books have reduced the number of books lost and kept the library a quiet haven from always noisy halls and often noisy study halls.

In calculating tough math problems such as those that students encounter in the higher courses of Analytic Geometry and Algebra III, deep concentration is a necessity.

Math Department Features "New Math" Techniques

Computers may occasionally make errors, but madern math, never! With strong conviction math teachers guided their sometimes bewildered students from the familiar footpaths of traditional cancepts onto the new highways af sets and updated curriculum and up to the hallowed, many-calculated higher planes af advanced mathematics. Math 8 and 9 pravided the basic essentials needed in advanced ar practical mathematics and introduced the basic cancepts af the "new math" that so baffled wauld-be parent helpers. Algebra I and II explared equations, inequalities, functions, sequences and series, vectars, exponents, logarithms, and preview-ed trigonometric functions under the principles of the set theary. Unified geometry, which combined plane and solid, delved into spatial relationships and the relationships existing between points, lines, and planes, The students use the old bean in arriving at their q.e.d.'s. Trig, invalving indirect measurement, lagarithmic computation, with its algebraic study af geometric figures and preparatian far calculus, and Algebra III, teasing the minds of ardent math students, formed the higher peaks of high schaal math, pointing encaurogingly ta greater challenge in the college future.

Miss Brinkley observes as math students calculate.

Students Learn Wonders Of Science

Liquid filled flosks reflect the diligent studies of the students during experiments in the Chemistry Lob.

This has often been called the "scientific age," age of research and development, test tubes, atoms, serums and pills. To be able to compete in this technical, factual world, where "survival of the fittest" is the established law, students should be acquainted with the basic enigma of science. The general sciences in eighth and ninth grades gave the students a smattering of basic knowledge from photosynthesis to electronic charges. The miracle and construction of life was examined through the microscopes and dissections of the biology lab where students were initiated in the discovery and procedure of lab science. Chemistry was a chart to be memorized of elements, composite properties, atomic charges, number, weight, experiments that produced colored flames and horrible smells, a first-hand knowledge of bunsen burners and test tubes, and learning the difference between an acid and a base the hard way. Physics students applied principles of mathematics to solve problems in mechanics, heat, sound, light, and electricity.

Dissecting croyfish is only one of the many discoveries students enrolled in biology ore introduced to.

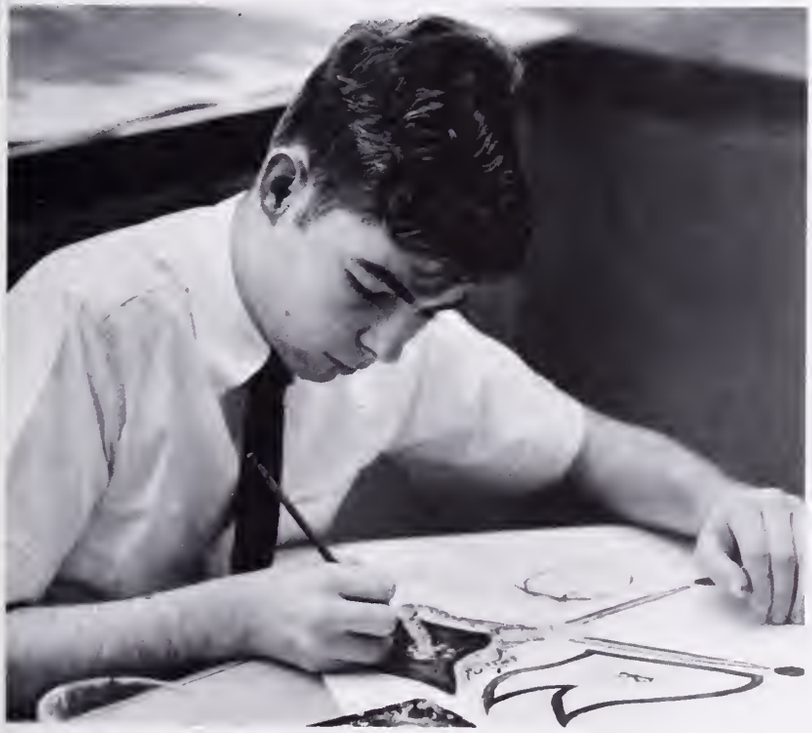
In Both Fine Arts and Industrial Arts Courses

Talent is the ability to capture what you see, feel, or want to express through art, music, or drama; talent such as this received direction from the fine arts instructors. The drama courses were not merely lessons and experience in acting; they provided the students with a thorough background in the creation and production of a play. Students whose musical training had inspired creativity received guidance for their ability in Music Theory and Music Appreciation. The exploration of the many elements of the artist, in ceramics, wire, paints, even sawdust, resulted in ingenious displays of their work.

The Industrial Arts courses provided another contact with sawdust for talented students. Woodshop students had ample experience with it as they learned the techniques of lathing, conditioning, staining and good construction. Drafting students put their tools and skill to work toward their biggest project—the design of a house in Drafting III. Students in electronics learned the fundamentals of circuitry and power necessary to run this mechanized world, while future mechanics studied the fundamentals of motor repair.



Fred Rudiger displays his artistic ability by painting his own personal coat of arms.

Students learn the methods of welding in the Power Mechanics course offered in the Industrial Arts Department.

Students Prepare For Future Through Vocational Courses

For purely academic students the business department has traditionally been a far-off realm of secretarial courses, but the skills required of students today exceed the mere thinking-learning process, and the demands of modern living have put business courses in the classification of "necessities." Two semester courses relatively new to Cox helped students meet the taxing trials of term papers and compositions, "preferably typed," and the rigors of note-taking from a northern teacher who spits out 180 words a minute; these were notehand, offered to juniors and college-bound seniors only, and personal typing. Shorthand and Typing I and II developed basically the same skills but in relation to the higher degree of speed and accuracy and more specialized use that would be required in an office or business. Students were also introduced to the principles of business law, economics, and accurate and efficient bookkeeping procedures. Clerical office practice trained students in the use of various types of mimeographing machines and working under simulated office conditions. Vocational office training provided for part-time job experience in an office or business.

P. E. Program Emphasizes Physical Fitness

Out of the great civilizations of the past have come our present day physical education programs. The Romans, the Greeks, and the Egyptians were extremely conscious of the importance of body conditioning to maintain stable civilizations. Our Cox Physical Education teachers have strenuously carried out the tradition with a yell to "try harder," "lift that weight," "run that mile," or "make that basket." With an alternation of Health and Physical Education comes the awareness that mental alertness and physical fitness go hand in hand. The intramurals and playoffs between classes gave students the opportunity to excel in leadership, sportsmanship, and skills.

Valleyball is just one of the many sports taught to the Girls Physical Educotion Classes. These girls are enjoying a friendly match between two squads.

The P.E. student exerts his energy to show off his skill on the horizontol bor.

How can we express 4 years of friendship. All the trouble we have been in and our trip to New York. The fun and the bad times in bandwich Runner and his toupee. The times we have spent over each others house. It has been so much fun. I hope that after graduation we can still keep in touch. I shall never forget you Sauna. I do hope that you will call me and write to keep in touch. Best of luck always love you Sherry Seniors inhabit a unique dark-bright world full of lovely yesterdays and brilliant tomorrows, definite hopes and vague fears, a world of breath-taking, unending, vibrant motion and ceaseless activity. Underclassmen stand in awe of them; juniors are sure they know how they feel; but only seniors can know the anxiety of delayed decisions, the "transcript trauma," and the "mail-box watch," the extreme discomfort of posing in droopy drapes or choking ties and still smiling radiantly and serenely for senior pictures, the excitement and disappointment of receiving the final portrait and discovering that it looks just like the original, the irony of only ten seniors the entire length of the "senior table," the first touch of nostalgia at Homecoming and the indignation at the score, the tension for two weeks before the Prom — "Who will I ask?" "Will I be asked?" — and the formal scramble, the perpetual feeling of anticipation and the let-down when it's over, and in the last year it's really over. Part of this excess emotion and energy was channeled into the extensive plans and headaches in preparation for graduation; part of it sold candy door-to-door to raise money for the prom and the senior gift; part of it poured forth in poignant witticisms from the silver tongued, extremely witty characters in The Man Who Came To Dinner; and part of it burst out in the school spirit of the senior benchwarmers whose green letters echo the cheers of "GO COX FALCONS!" In the midst of all the confusion and tumultuous excitement of this year, the seniors seemed caught up in the rapidly whirling waters of an eddy, a whirl-pool of blue and silver, senior buttons, chocolate bars, graduation announcements, calling cards, "today we follow, tomorrow we lead," tomorrow, tomorrow. But it was only the sensation of surging forward, mounted on the crest of the wave, propelled by the unlimited power, the uncontrollable energy of four long years.

Like swirling, turbulent currents, crashing together, seething beneath the threatening white caps, like sweeping undercurrents, struggling to break through, the juniors spent this year in active anticipation and preparation for the responsibilities of leadership. The earthshaking decision of what color stone to get, the shock of P.S.A.T. and S.A.T. the first time around, tours of colleges and a growing pile of college catalogues gave the juniors hints of the anxious and climactic days to come. The talent show, "Bits and Pieces," was acclaimed a resounding success; after three years of saying there would be a flagpole erected in the stadium, there was; the W.G.H. disc jockeys playing the male faculty members packed the stands for the Microphonies Basketball Game; school spirit was encouraged by after game sock-hops; and unable to wait for their take-over, a "bury the seniors" tribute was conducted. With the thrill of success came the satisfaction of accomplishment; with the last election, the arrival of their class rings, and a glance backward at all that had come before, came the realization that tomorrow the crest would be theirs.

The Sophomore leaves behind the excitement of a new environment; yet the comforting thought of only one more year and the anticipation of graduation are still found under "things to come." It is the trough between the power and momentum of the waves, the point of experience after the first surge of initiation, before the final burst of completion. It is the year when motivation comes hard, and the "sophomore slump" rages like an epidemic, resulting in low magazine sales and sluggish enthusiasm. But the class officers and committees met this challenge, and the class activities provided the impetus of participation and action. Who could stand still in the blast of beat (and heat) pouring from the cafeteria at a Junior-Sophomore hop after a football game, or stare unmoved at the tempting array of pastries at a bake sale, or feel indifferent during the excitement and suspense before the Mr. and Miss Sophomore Dance, or be immune to the infectious, riotous laughter at the Donkey Baseball Game? No one it seems, for the end of this year brought acceleration, a crescendo bearing them up with promise of the future and onward to test their strength in the rushing currents of the two years ahead.

The freshmen year begins timidly in an uncertain new element. Everything is strange, confusing, hectic — for everything is new. A vast sea of faces and feelings which they do not recognize or understand confront them, and they form their own part of this sea. They are inscrutable and silent, but there is motion. At first it is invisible as everyone goes their seperate way, balancing and maintaining the surface calm; yet it cannot be contained. Cheering at football games, working on committees, forming the organization of their class, plunging enthusiastically into school activities, striving to make the traditional Freshman Fair a success this year, interest and participation move them forward, and they rise on the initial swell of high school life.

It was a big jump from the familiar atmosphere and order of an elementary school or even a junior high to the confusion and complexity of Cox, but the eighth graders arrived with fresh ideas and new enthusiasm, weathered the storm, and as veterans of one year could view with security the place they had made for themselves and point with pride to their many achievements. In the competition between the classes during the S.C.A. magazine drive, the seniors may have sold the most as a group, but the high salesman for the school was an eighth grader. Their constitution was completed and approved early in the first semester allowing them or throw them immediately into the mainstream of student life; this would have been impossible. But what they did, they did well, and as the becalmed band of ocean called the doldrums stretches in endless, apparent inactivity, waiting only for the winds to blow over it to reveal its great power, so they, under the winds of influence and change, showed their vast potential and the characteristics of leadership.

Around the nucleus of the forever buzzing, busy Student Activities office, the southern drawl of a new director, always hurried, worried, now slightly gray, a president who protests when students insist on speaking of "the S.C.A." in that ominous tone that sounds as though it were something from the moon, "You are the S.C.A.," and filing cabinets full of reports and records on the everyday, colossal business of keeping the students running smoothly has built the architectural wonder of the student activities and organization at Cox. Despite certain changes at the top level, the student body remained much the same except that the many transferred and the horde of new arrivals that took their place, filled the school to overflowing, and made vacant seats a rarity. The new students were given the red carpet treatment during the orientation phase of "Howdy Week," when guides helped find last rooms and an assembly acquainted them with the ins and outs of Cox. But the welcome back "howdy" was for everyone and the name tags that many people thought were sort of corny helped to break the ice. Two innovations early in the year brought enthusiasm from the students; for the first time the S.C.A. cards were free and the Student handbook, The Nidus, which had cost the S.C.A. so much time, effort, and money was a big success. And then a big boost to morale and school pride came with the announcement that the State S.C.A. Conference would be held at Cox this year, the first time it would be held in this area, and that seven hundred delegates were expected! A domestic exchange program was initiated this year also, another first for the community, in which thirty students would participate, and it was "Hershey, Pennsylvania or Bust!" There was a patio party that wound up being held in the cafeteria, a few hundred feet of pennies — not quite a mile, and a telegram to Vietnam for the Christmas holidays, and everyone agreed in one breathless breath that it was a most successful year.

ICC Sets up Judicial Review

It has been called "Inter-club Conflict" and probably many other names but the I.C.C. or Inter-Club Council serves as a coordinator, overseer, and, believe it or not, a peacemaker for the network of clubs that form the extra-curricular program. The summer and mid-term leadership conferences are the scene of most of the planning, and the routine would be boring if it were not for the spicy arguments over confetti and who cleans it up and the mad scramble for pep weeks, dances, and candy sales. The Bankruptcy Ball contributed to the distinction of the first year the I.C.C. was not in the red. College Night and Career Night, were organized through the cooperation of the clubs in the I.C.C. And the new policy of judicial review helped the I.C.C. to work more efficiently and effectively.

Takes Over Staff Sponsorship

In Her First Year at Cox

You begin with stacks of layout sheets, all blank, color charts, a couple of cameras, no money and maybe even a debt, a few scattered ideas, a few plans, a group of staff members, some veterans, some novices, many decisions, and many problems. You assign everyone a section, explain procedure, try and understand it, realize the vast responsibilities, check the schedule of deadlines, plan ahead, panic just before it's due, fall into the "first bell study hall" group, are prodded out, work, worry, try to be creative. You get the pictures taken, identified, cut, the copy written, edited, typed, rearrange the pages when a section has five extra ones, sell ads, sell annuals, check the proofs, sit on pins and needles until the finished annuals arrive, and collapse in disbelief and joy when you realize that amid all the mistakes, last minute corrections, frantic preparation, pictures, pages, names — somehow you produced a yearbook.

Imaginative Art Club Members Enhance Homecoming

The Art Club is a "visible" effort of the appreciation of art among students. It's purpose is to help the observer to look and really see, to see and understand, and then to recreate what has been seen and felt. But this interest is not confined to members only. The school as a whole has benefitted by the Homecoming corsages, their Homecoming display, and the Art Show. Also, because a pleasant atmosphere is conducive to good study habits, the Art Club has the continuous job of enhancing the beauty of our school.

Calculating Chess Club

Check-mates Opponents

Students bent over what looks like a checker board, deeply immersed in thought, with carved pieces before them are not playing a game. They are planning strategy, calculating the next move in their imaginations, concentrating all their intellectual ability on the solution of an intellectual problem — on checkmate! Chess is not for wiggle-worms or easy-going people, but for thinkers, the mathematically minded, people with patience, and those who like the whetting essence of challenge and competition. The Chess Club was formed for the satisfaction of such students, to increase their prowess in the game, and resulted in the formation of a Cox Chess Team, which met with great success, winning most of its matches in its first season.

They practice logical, realistic, and exact thinking. There can be no room for mere supposition with the members of the Math and Science Club. Reason and fact are the basis of their interested search for truth in a complex scientific age. For them it is a world of glass beakers, metric scales, and mathematical formulas, symbolic of accuracy in the pursuit of their investigations. Members may number few, but their strength lies in their ability and versatility with numbers.

Bake Sales, Toy Drives, Cookbook Sales Highlight Homemakers Year

Art and beauty are indispensable to man, both to his sanity and to his survival in this atomic age. The homemaker in a true sense is an artist. She is alert to patterns, forms, and colors of delight, of meaning, and of mood. She uses her ingenuity and talent to create a loving and secure atmosphere within the home. The Future Homemakers of America are striving to make this image a reality. Bake sales, toy drives, and cookbook sales are initial steps toward the challenge of new horizons.

F.T.A. Members Assume Roles Of Teachers

Decisions about the future are long in the making, stymied by uncertainty and perpetual procrastination. But one of the organizations that is a testing ground for student interest and ability in the search for a career is the F.T.A. Although students are well acquainted with the role of teachers and the profession of teaching itself, they are only on the receiving end of this two-fold process, and it is hard to maintain an objective outlook in the daily grueling grind for grades. Members of the F.T.A. obtained understanding through the experience of assuming some of the responsibilities of a teacher, such as grading papers, typing and mimeographing exams and averaging grades. The teachers were delighted with this service!

CMA "Injects" Future Medics With Professional Enthusiasm

Medicine is a boundless field open to all who can be tagged "concerned" for anything from the cavities in your teeth to the corns on your toes. The Cox Medical Association seeks to prepare members to undertake the profession in medicine which will be the most rewarding to them. Twenty-five active members are interested in various fields of the healing arts. These future nurses, doctors, medical secretaries, physical therapists, medical technologists, psychologists, dentists, psychiatrists, chiropractors, and . . . and . . . and, had a guest speaker from a hospital every other meeting to lecture on his specific profession. Trips to Norfolk General and De Paul hospitals, a tour of Washington's medical museum, a Christmas party at King's Daughters Hospital helped to maintain enthusiasm for the study of medicine.

The F.B.L.A. is a highly specialized organization that indoctrinates its members in the sacred secrets of credits and debits, files and cross files, stencils and dittos, dictation and transcription, and the world of highly temperamental I.B.M. machines. Occasionally seasoned veteran agents who have made a place for themselves in the field of business will deliver encouraging and enlightening talks to the members on the profitable opportunities that are open to them. They are well-disciplined and energetic and often take field trips to case the business situation, report their findings and create interest in their activities by a Business Week, deliver Christmas baskets to needy families with a very business-like manner, and even type stencils and dittos for teachers despite attacks of carbon paper blues or ditto dumps. They are trained to the highest degree for a take-over, a full scale invasion of their prospective field, the field of business.

Latin Club Preserves Tradition In Saturnalia '65

Rejuvenated by the influx of eager New Latin students, the Latin Club flourished amid the dignity of togas and antique verbs. The Greek drama may hold a higher place in the literature of the world, but the plays by members in sheets, spouting words and speeches in Latin with the greatest "ease" (Cicero was rolling in his urn), certainly demand a place of recognition for student interest and initiative. Saturnalia was a very festive time for the Romans of old, and their modern counterparts preserved it well in a "live-it-up-before-exams party." Although Santa Claus was unknown to the Latins, the members entertained an orphanage for Christmas. Latin Club members held fast to their traditions while striking out impressively in their campaign to conquer Caesar among others and make their language live.

French Club Members Participate in French Salon

Bonjour! This is France — the center for art, the fashion style setter, and the gourmet capital of the world. Eager art students and interested spectators clamor to the Louvre to stand in awe of countless masterpieces. Women the world over, and the men who admire them, will never cease to blubber over a Paris original. And last but never least are delicate French pastries, French bread, French wine, and yes, even snails are the culmination of delight for any hardy connoissuer. The French Club has brought this a little taste of "french finery" to our hallowed halls of learning for us to enjoy as we may. With genuine French books available in the library, a French salon every month, a French newspaper entitled "La Causerie," and Christmas caroling (in French naturally), they have taken a big step forward to bring France just a little bit closer.

Vive la France.

Vive la French Club.

Spanish Club Members Celebrate Christmas With a Latin Flair

Even the rain in Spain could not dampen the enthusiasm of the Spanish-speaking students who belong to the Spanish Club. By using their knowledge of a common foreign language as a basis, they increased their vocabularies by conversation and programs in Spanish and their interest in the language itself by the spice of enjoying it with others. You don't have to speak Spanish to hold a successful bake sale or enjoy the international flavor of Washington, D. C., or slug away during the interclub hockey tournament, or design and build a homecoming display. But when it comes to enjoying and understanding the meetings and activities, especially such things as singing Christmas carols in Spanish, it helps. And you can speak Spanish without belonging to the Spanish Club, but it helps to bridge the gap between textbook Spanish and conversational speech, between learning and full appreciation.

Membership in Spanish Honor Society is Evidence of Excellence

It isn't easy to grasp Spanish idioms, wield foreign grammar, remember the gender of all the nouns, speak unbrokenly or without a "southern" Spanish drawl, read Cervantes in the original, think in Spanish, live up to "Todos a una," or even pronounce Palacio Valdes much less have an A average in Spanish every year to qualify for membership. And that is the reason the Spanish Honor Society has special meaning; it recognizes the merit and talent of those who do make the grade, even though it isn't easy. The work doesn't stop here though; for those who feel they have "mastered" the language, there is the challenge of composing a literary booklet in Spanish.

Girls' Athletic Association Sponsors Hampton Roads Field Hockey Tournament

While the bays rested comfartably an their laurels, an organized female conspiracy called the Girls' Athletic Assaciation asserted their awn undisputable athletic ability. Olympic Team, repairing athletic equipment, throwing a spaghetti dinner, and sponsaring a crab soccer game had wan them the interest club award the previous year. This year they sponsared the Hampton Roads District Field Hockey Taurnament and placed nine girls on the two district teams. Yes, these girls were definitely on the move; their foothold in the athletic program was an established fact.

A letter is more than a symbol of accomplishment; it is the insignia of a very close-knit fellowship, outstanding athletes. Whether on the football field, the baseball diamond, the basketball court, a concrete stretch of track, wrestling mats, or tennis courts, they are all striving for the same thing — victory. It is not victory over an opponent — that is only the result, not the goal—but victory of special ability and skill over the limitations of their own bodies. The rewards is not a big gold "C" on their sweaters, a trophy, nor the naive admiration of spectators and hero-prone students. They are not heroes; they are boys on special diets, with aching muscles at the beginning of the season and sometimes broken bones or shattered hopes at the end. Those who try their best often fail and try again, grit their teeth and taste the bitterness of perspiration and defeat, and just when they are on the verge of desperation, find that they have broken through. Their reward is knowing that they reached and surpassed their goal, that they performed better than before, that they won!

The Fine Arts Club, a new arrival on the scene of student activities, created quite a stir in the sedate, upper circles of Cox organizations. But the members, and especially their enthusiastic sponser, Mr. Koeppen, felt that what they had undertaken was of the greatest significance and importance. The excitement, confidence, and enjoyment which characterized the club and the members themselves defied cynics and perhaps aroused just a little envy from the less energetic, although well-established, organizations. This was an experiment in discovery and education. Culture for them was not a stuffy lecture on Shakespeare's style or something that went out with pompous old ladies in powdered wigs. It was knowing what there is in the world of art, music, drama, so they could decide for themselves what they liked. It was knowing enough about Rembrandt and Zoya to say why one liked Glick; it was appreciating ballet by the masters, Nureyev and Fonteyn; it was putting Shakesepare back on stage where he belongs; it was associating Wagner with the music of his operas and not just the Viking horns; it was series of films on the humanities and it was insight and a test of taste.

Drama enthusiasts, acting connoisseurs, patrons of the arts, dignified dilettantes could never qualify for the honorary dramatic society, the National Thesbians. Anyone who is unaccustomed to hot lights, three layers of melting make-up, playing to a full house, rigorous practice with late hours and no time for homework, nervous butterflies, wielding a paint brush, hammer, and stencils as well as a script could not be a Thesbian. Anyone who is too delicate for prompters stools, is too shy to publicize, considers being in charge of props, programs, costumes, management, or direction as menial or only second-rate is and will remain in those proverbial dramatic wings. On stage the members of the Cox chapter of the Thesbians are those students who have most consistently devoted their time and talents to dramatic productions and other related activities, and as they have acted well their parts, here all their honor lies.

The club sponsored a "School Spirit Week," which included a funeral for the Cavaliers. Each month Kappa donates a book to the library. It also gives carnations to the teachers on their birthdays. By tradition the club presents the "Best All Around Award" and sponsors "Cupid Capers." It initiated the annual Powderpuff Football game, this year challenging Theta-Chi-Sigma.

Sigma Alpha Beta Tri-Hi-Y members were caught in a whirl-wind of activity. After a hectic summer of making sugary concoctions for the bake sale, scrubbing and splashing cars at the car wash, and "white elephant" hunting in attics for the August rummage sale, members were ready for an even busier fall. Winter brought a rousing "School Spirit Week," a candy sale, gold crepe paper mums for Homecoming Week, and a My Fair Lady theater party. Christmas found Sigma Alpha Beta members busily making the holiday merry for the needy of Tidewater with a tremendously successful Joy Fund Drive and a special visit to elderly hospital patients with packages and favors. In the spring, Sigma Alpha Beta again presented the Sadie Hawkins Dance—dog patch style — of course! Throughout the year, Sigma Alpha Beta members worked to render Christian service in the community and in the world by visiting hospitals every holiday and by continuously supporting an Indian orphan through the Christian Children's Fund.

Infectious Spirit Week

For the Green and Gold

Under the sway of Christian ideals and goals of service, Theta Chi Sigma is definitely un-sorority and un-cliquish. You can tell a member by her unlimited friendliness, a sparkle of warmth, excitement and purpose, and a quiet sense of responsibility. She would have the confidence of personal worth that comes from doing, working with and for others, a healthy glow from leading an active life and hours of strenuous football in preparation for the powder-puff game (it may be unlady-like but it's great exercise), and the kind of outgoing, personable smile that could cause a smile in response on the face of orphans at Christmas. Of course she'd love to talk (what girl doesn't), and pajama parties is where all the talking gets done. This girl throws herself into a week of spirit boosting with abstract posters and buttons advising everyone to get the "spirit." She would know the real feeling of Thanksgiving by donating baskets to a needy family, the fun of work-together meetings, and the rewards of belonging to a club like Theta Chi Sigma.

Sigma Chi Sigma Brings Hope to A Crippled Child

A group of hard working, energentic girls working for a common Christian cause will never cease to produce results. No matter what the situation, success is inevitable. Each girl shoulders her share of responsibility willingly and stands by to help the "other guy", too. They are seeking to build a fellowship of girls devoted to the task of realizing those ideals of personal and social living to which we are committed as Christians. Their goal is to grow, in person, in friendship, and in knowledge. But growing involves doing, and the Sigma Chi Sigma girls were doing this year, with a Thanksgiving basket to a needy family, a window wash, the Mr. and Miss Personality Dance, a Teacher's Privilege Auction, and therapy for a crippled child.

Amicitia Y-Teens builds a fellowship of girls with a common goal to grow as a person, in friendship with people of all races, religions, and nationalities, and in the knowledge and love of God. This past year Amicitia sponsored a welfare family, collected Thanksgiving baskets, sent shoeboxes full of Christmas gifts to the soldiers in Viet Nam, and visited an old peoples' home at Christmas to sing carols and spread Christmas cheer. They also held a mother-daughter banquet, had an Easter egg hunt for an orphanage, sponsored a sock hop after a football game, and gave a trophy case to the school. Y-Teens have come together with a willingness to serve both in the school and community, and to make this world a better place to live.

Under the banner of "Service Club of the Year, 1965," they held a canned food drive and dance, participated in the Kiwanis Kid's Day, maintained the heroic tradition in a marathon basketball game, met their rivals in the Hi-Y-Key Club game, threw a district conference and a banquet. The annual Holly Wreath Ball was held with the theme "White Christmas," and the Variety Show demonstrated a certain sense of satire and humor.

Entire Squad Scores Against Bayside

The high-jumping Falcons initiated a promising season with a 55-48 victory over Oscar Smith. The second game, a 58-57 heartbreaking loss, was to another city school, Virginia Beach. But the high-flying Falcons bounced back for three consecutive wins—65-58 against Churchland, 68-62 over Craddock, and a 54-53 squeaker at Great Bridge. A well-balanced Granby team handed Cox its second loss, 55-47. Princess Anne added a 70-55 defeat to bring Cox losses to three, but the mighty Falcons got their revenge by passing Churchland 55-51. On its way to the district championship, Norview handed Cox a 73-58 loss. Despite this setback, the Falcons continued to soar, trouncing Deep Creek 73-42 and Bayside 88-55. Pouring it on after a slow start, a strong Cox team out-scored the traditional rival Kellam 61-53. In a hard-fought contest, Maury managed to pass the Falcons 67-60. Avenging an earlier loss, Cox trampled Virginia Beach 66-56, and went to top Oscar Smith 55-48 before bowing to a strong Wilson team in the final minutes 48-42. A sharp-shooting Cox squad returned to wallop arch-rivals Kellam 90-48. Dan Wells, the state's top scorer, helped Princess Anne pull through by a narrow margin of 66-60, closing the regular season for the Falcons at 11 wins and 7 losses—good enough to tie Granby for fifth place in the district. In the first round of tournament play an eagle-eyed Wilson squad eliminated the Falcons from the foul line 50-43.

Falcon Matmen Finish Third In Regional And In State Tournaments With 12-1 Season Record

The Falcon wrestlers completed the best season since the team's organization four years ago. They compiled a remarkable 12-1 record, losing only to state champion Granby. The season was highlighted by victories over Norview, Maury, and Wilson teams. After the early season loss to Granby, the Cox matmen ran up a ten-match winning streak. Seven of the twelve starting grapplers will return next year.

The Cox wrestlers placed third in the district and sent five boys to the state tournament at Washington and Lee High School in Arlington. Ricky Meyers and Thom Gallagher emerged as state champions in their respective weight classes while Cox finished third in the state.

Golf Team Looks Forward To Rewarding Season

A "swinging" game, a frustrating game, a challenging game, golf once more, after here-again-gone-again status, took its place on the docket of varsity sports. Back on the courses of the area, members slaved to cut strokes from their scores, cut out the slices, steer clear of water, sand, and the tree traps, and get in shape for formal competition. Golf as a game for the individual demanding great individual skill and concentration, proved a gain in team ability and athletic diversity.

Front Row: L. Moce, J. McDonald, Mr. Lumpkin, R. Smith; Back Row: R. Drennen, C. Collins, R. Gallup, P. Forgrum

With very few boys returning, Cox faced a "it could go either way" season with a relatively raw team. To add to the atmosphere of newness, Mr. Lumpkin took over as coach, and the new and well-equipped tennis court served as the scene of the team's trials, efforts, and debut matches. The practice to perfect the serve, return, and backhand skills of this fast-moving game was only the beginning of a period of adjustment for grouping of the singles and doubles for all the matches so that Cox would come out with a winning combination. Cox has a history of only one previous season of competition. Enthusiasm for this sport, not usually a spectator's sport, was mild, but the spirit and hard work of the members of the team promised a successful, if not a completely victorious season.

Dick Drennen, junior member of the team, returns the serve.

Chuck Callins, another junior member of the team, returns with a side-swing to score against a teammate in a practice match.

Hockey Team Completes Undefeated Season

This year girl athletics took the field in the hard running, hard hitting block, take-away, scoop, drive, dribble, pass, short corner, long corner, "sticks", bully, rushes, covers, tightened grips, hopes, goals of a field hockey game. With the full schedule of at least three practices a week and a packed season of twelve games, the girls' hockey team pushed on to a completely victorious record of 12-0, remaining unscored upon in games of tough competition. The Hampton Roads Hockey Tournament was held at Cox and out of twenty-two possible players on the District Team, Cox placed nine. Although field hockey for girls is not considered a varsity sport this year, they have hopes for continued success and possible recognition as a varsity team in the future.

Not everyone can run a four minute mile, keep up the pace for a cross-country meet, break 70 on a tough course, shoot baskets to the tune of 400 per season, or participate in State Gymnastic Tournaments, but the development of skills, the grueling hours of practice, the excitement and sometimes disappointment of spirited competition was enjoyed by participants in various intramural sports throughout the year. Class competition after-school play-offs, amateurs throwing every bit of energy and effort into the games of pros, the dear-brought lessons of skill and sportsmanship, greatly enriched the athletic prowess of students outside the inner circles of participants in varsity sports.

Football without cheerleaders is like apple pie without ice-cream. Basketball without cheerleaders is like bread without butter. Wrestling without cheerleaders is like a phone that never rings. Cox with cheerleaders is the most spirited school around.

Summer practices on the beach, slumber parties, and finally a beach party in which Cox was host to the Virginia Beach city cheerleaders started off the year. September brought hard work after school with combined practices of the junior varsity and varsity squads. With the election of four varsity cheerleaders to the Homecoming court, the remaining six led the largest crowd of the 1965 football season. The Cox cheerleaders continued throughout the year to cheer all sports on to victory.

Coxmen Serve as Escorts for Homecoming Court

Guys in green jackets with loud, booming voices may not be able to pump the old spirit, the get-up-and-holler, into an increasingly apathetic student body, but they'll go hoarse trying, at least they would if they were members of the Coxmen. At the head of the school spirit group, they printed programs, arranged rooter buses to transport students to and from away games, and sold zany pep ribbons to increase the excitement and interest in the athletic events of the year. Two peppy mascots and about twenty-five boys who liked to yell could be seen at practically every game stirring up their own cheering sections in the stands. Members of the Coxmen acted as escorts for the homecoming court, and they set a record for building a display in twenty-four hours.

Energetic girls with loud voices, unbounded enthusiasm for sports, including baseball, track, and wrestling, an undefinable element called "school spirit" that usually means "they're always there," who go in for a cause and don't mind standing up or wearing buttons to prove it formed a new group at Cox this year and called themselves the Cox Pep Club. Their participation and support of athletic events contributed greatly to the enthusiasm of the students and spectators and to the morale of the teams.

An Anxious Homecoming Dilemma Brings A Magnificent Success and a Worthy Precedent selection, the remaining six Varsity cheerleaders pose with the Cox Falcon.

Anything that is attempted for the first time is inevitably fraught with indecision, unforeseen calamities, frantic preparation, and utter confusion, and the first Cox homecoming was no exception. For over a month the raging debate of Homecoming versus Senior Night distracted and divided the student body — everyone was absolutely certain that everyone else wanted a homecoming or that those who didn't were decidedly in the minority. But despite this "unanimous" opinion, the twenty minutes of "homecoming" were devoted to dual tribute to the graduates and the seniors. A period of continual crisis and dilemma preceded the panic date, November 5. One float, no float, yes, a float from the Oyster Bowl, as big as a desk! no, a nice size — and the float for the queen and her court was arranged. Clubs cheerfully volunteered to build displays, waited until the week before to begin, and missed two days of school to complete them a couple of hours before game-time. To make sure that the program would run smoothly, there was a practice the night before, and everything went just like clock-work after the coach's keys were found and the stadium lights turned on, the sprinklers were turned off, a truck was found to pull the float for that night, and they finally got under way two hours late. But the half-time was lovely; everything went well and as the game was televised, there was the added excitement of seeing it again the next day. And even though the "well-lighted" place provided for the displays was in dark shadow and the graduates felt that they had been cheated by a rose by some other name, a Senior Night called Homecoming, there was no denying that it was an unforgettable evening.

The Curtain Rises on the Senior Class Play— THE MAN WHO CAME TO DINNER is a Smash Success

Miss Prynn, the nurse, is swept off her feet upon the arrival of Bonjo.

Expressions of doubt cover the faces of the Stanley household.

Maggie's old friend, Beverly Carlton, greets her with a kiss.

The "man who came to dinner," that scoundrelly, irascible, lovable old reprobate, Mr. Whiteside, brought with him a retinue of the most unique and incongruous visitors, friends, pets, attendants, resulting in the most impossible and absurd incidents imaginable or unimaginable. One couldn't really call him egotistical, selfish, insistent on having his own way — he would deny it every time — although he would lose his temper occasionally at the nurse and use rather unkind phrases in reference to her, he did completely take over the Stanley's home with no regard to them whatever, advise their son to run off to Australia or somewhere impossible, and plan an elopement for their daughter, and he did betray his own secretary, Maggie, by his adroit plotting in the "keep Maggie from marrying Burt" scheme. But there was his better nature too, his patronage of the home for misplaced convicts, the joy he brought to an innocent little old lady who had the misfortune to kill her mother with an axe, and he had many friends who remembered him at Christmas with such useful gifts as cockroaches, penguins, and mummy cases. All this created chaos in the Stanley household and uncontrollable laughter and amusement in the audience whose genuine appreciation of every witty line made all the late practices and headaches over props and scenery seem remote and trivial to the senior cast in comparison to the production of a most successful play, The Man Who Came to Dinner.

The last year has been a blast. We finally made seniors and may live to graduate. Best wishes and good luck from now on. "Lab" Lynda

Mr. Whitesides creates pandamonium in the home of the Stanleys.

Sheridan Whitesides, portrayed by Tom Robinett, leads the cast as the sarcastically overbearing "man who came to dinner."

Sir Horry, played by Fred Behning, and Lady Larken, played by Jackie White, pledge their love in a marriage secretly planned so that Queen Agravaine would not know.

The entire cast of twenty-two poses in the court scene of "Once Upon A Mattress." The musical was deemed a great success — well proven by the audience appreciation.

Once Upon A Mattress Is A Wonderful Concoction

Of Weeks of Practice and Exceptional Talent

It was certainly spring, cars could be seen at school until 10 and sometimes 11, and the night watchman was unusually grumpy. Someone was building something and the auditorium curtains were never opened now, but took on an air of silent mystery. Something was definitely going on. Could it be? Yes, it was. Another musical! The ramparts of a lovely fairy tale castle had already transformed the stage, the costume department faced a monumental task, and members of the cast of Once Upon a Mattress were eagerly getting their numbers in shape for the opening night. As one became accustomed to the dazzling colors of the medieval dress and the last strains died away from the first song in came the indomitable queen and it was immediately apparent to all by the hisses and boos and because she wore black that she was the antagonist. In the other corner were the persecuted prince who only wanted to get married and out from under his mother's thumb, his speechless father, Lady Larken and Sir Harry, who were married only nobody knew, and all the ladies and lords of the court, for no one could get married until Queen Agravaine found the real princess for poor Prince Dauntless. Then in through the window, soaked from swimming the moat, dressed in rags, came Princess Winnifred, commonly known as Fred, to tip the scales, settle the question, balance all accounts, and in general save the day. And so what began months before in long, mysterious practices, opened with "once upon a" ended with "happily ever after" and rounds of applause.

The main characters of the musical worked hard toward its success. They are Vickie Bartusiak, Rick Sullivan, Hugh Williams, Marianne Andersan, Mike Rasnick.

Marianne Andersan, portraying Queen Agravaine, screams with rage at the pitiful sight of Vickie Bartusiak, Winifred, the tambay princess.

Annual Junior Class Talent Show

Spotlights Able Students

It was an ordinary auditorium with blue tile and polka dot curtains that concealed a stage; it was worse than a pillory, too high, too near, too bare, too scary for timid hopefuls to try their talents on; it was the scene of wild confusion and dreary, daily rehearsals; it was finally the magical platform of a sophisticated night club and the stage of the Junior Class talent show, "Bits and Pieces." It echoed the normal turmoil of a study hall, then the tense voices of scared sopranos, the tremulous strumming of a nervous guitar at early practices, and the confident or at least poised sounds of professional amateurs performing their acts during dress rehearsal and the one night that counted; it rang with the contagious laughter at the antics of the entertaining m.c.'s and a comedy routine, and vibrated with the approval of the audience; it breathed the stillness of anticipation with the participants, their families and friends, as the winners were announced. And it was left silent and empty after the gaiety and excitement that the fake voice of a ventriloquist's dummy, the mellow tone of a Spanish guitar, the graceful gyrations of modern dance, lovely songs and lovely voices can bring to a room and a group of people was ended.

Talent isn't everything — or at least that's what Doug Tweed and Gene Cochran seem to think.

Awards Assembly Previews Graduation Excitement

In the spring, an Awards Assembly was held in the stadium. The seniors took their seats to the tune of "Pomp and Circumstance," the sun blared down in the May heat, and everyone was thankful for the chance of missing class and excited with the excitement of suspense. At this time the awards given by various clubs were presented to students who had best fulfilled the qualifications for "best girl athlete," "best all-around student," or "greatest contributor." The girl and boy with the highest scholastic average in each class were announced, and the band members received their bars and letters of recognition. A lull of hope and anticipation fell on many of the seniors as the scholarships were handed out, a hope that it was someone they knew or even maybe themselves. The titles of "Best Interest Club" and "Best Service Club" were bestowed and the members of the two organizations basked in their glory even though a few mumbles could be heard in the background. The presentation of the leadership award and the alma mater ended the program dedicated to recognizing student achievement.

March, 1965-March, 1966:

The World Surges Forward

Surging forth, the momentous current of world tides carried us to the crest of the waves. In agreements, conflicts, opinions, prejudices, events, incidents, firsts and lasts, the silent eddies were stirred by unrelenting forces in our world.

In the Virginia locality it was on election year—a new governor was chosen, a new administration was underway, an old Byrd stepped down as young Byrd stepped in. In our own city a controversy developed over the new Oceana High School—the students petitioned to try to keep the name as Virginia Beach High School. In sports, Newport News won the 1964-1965 track championship and Norview took the baseball title. Granby won the 1965 Eastern District Football Championship and were again state Wrestling Champs for the seventeenth time. Princess Anne and Norview bottled it out for Eastern District honors at the State Basketball Tournament.

On the national front President Johnson's Great Society continued along its way despite the failure to repeal 14B, as Medicare came into existence along with new immigration laws. The Republicans made an important comeback with the election of John Lindsay to New York's mayorship. The nation mourned the sudden death of a great statesman, Adlai Stevenson. The Watts, California riot in late summer put civil rights into the spotlight again. The U. S. went ahead in the Space Race with the McDivitt-White flight and walk-in-space, and the Cooper-Conrad flight which set a new record for hours in space.

On the international scene Viet Nam was number one item of concern. The U. S. tried an unsuccessful thirty-seven day peace offensive on North Viet Nam. France threatened to leave NATO, and President Charles De-Gaulle was forced to have a run-off election since he was unable to obtain a majority on the first ballot. Pope Paul visited the United States and spoke to the United Nations General Assembly in a historic first for the Catholic Church. While Red China developed the use of atomic energy for weapons, Soviet Russia continued its insistence for a disarmament conference. The India-Pakistan trouble rose to a new height and then quieted when the United Nations intervened. Mrs. Indirah Ghandi became India's Prime Minister after the death of Shastri. The Dominican Republic was South America's trouble spot as Castro-inspired fighters interfered in a revolutionary overthrow of the government.

The 1966 Talon could not have been published without the help and understanding of many wonderful individuals. First I would like to thank my Associate-editor and Girl-Friday, Cathy Rose. She spent endless hours drawing layouts for her non-artistic editor. Secondly I would like to thank our sponsor Miss Susan Lohr and our Director of Student Activities, Mr. Jerry Deviney for putting up with the hectic and usually late deadlines. Thirdly, thank you staff, Mr. Perry, and Mr. McIntosh for your devotion to the book. And last, but not least, thank you faculty, administration, and students for your wholehearted support of your yearbook, the 1966 Talon.

— Nancy Jane Holland, Editor

The 1966 Talon was published by the Hunter Publishing Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina. The Hunter representative for the Talon was Mr. John Perry. Photography was done by McIntosh Studios. The Sponsor of the Talon was Miss Susan Lohr, the Editor was Nancy Jane Holland, and the Associate-editor was Cathy Rose.

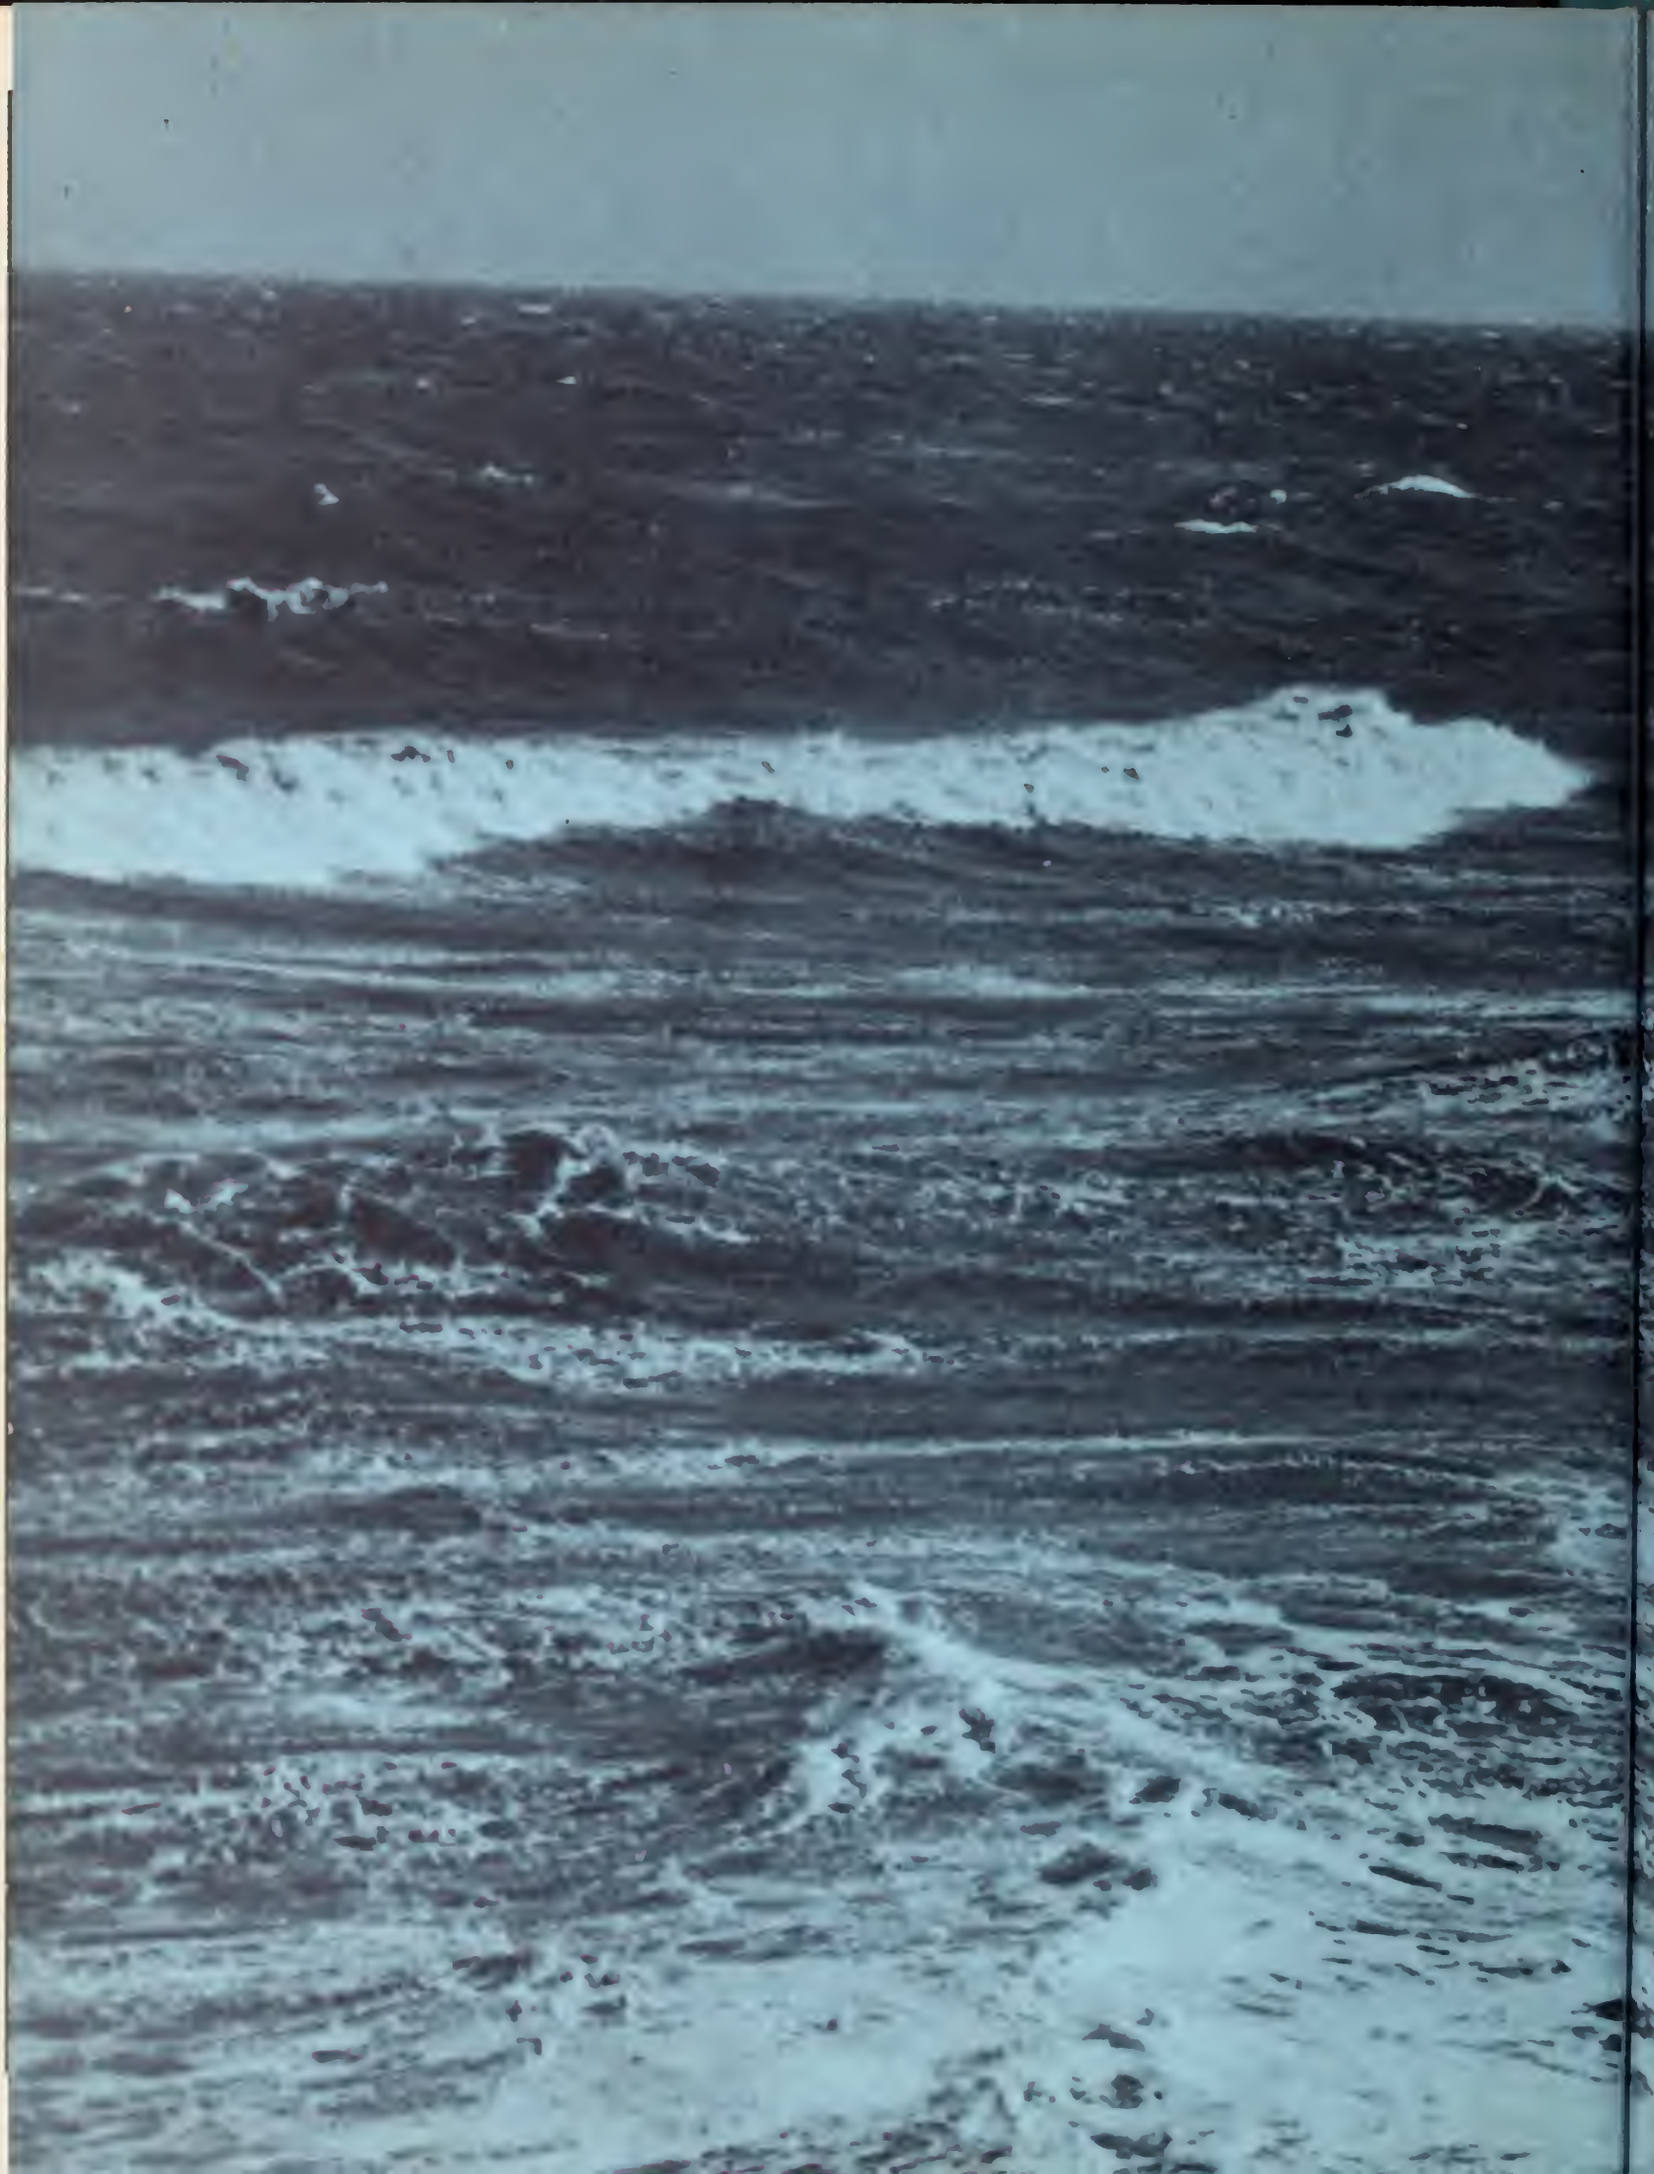
Laura,

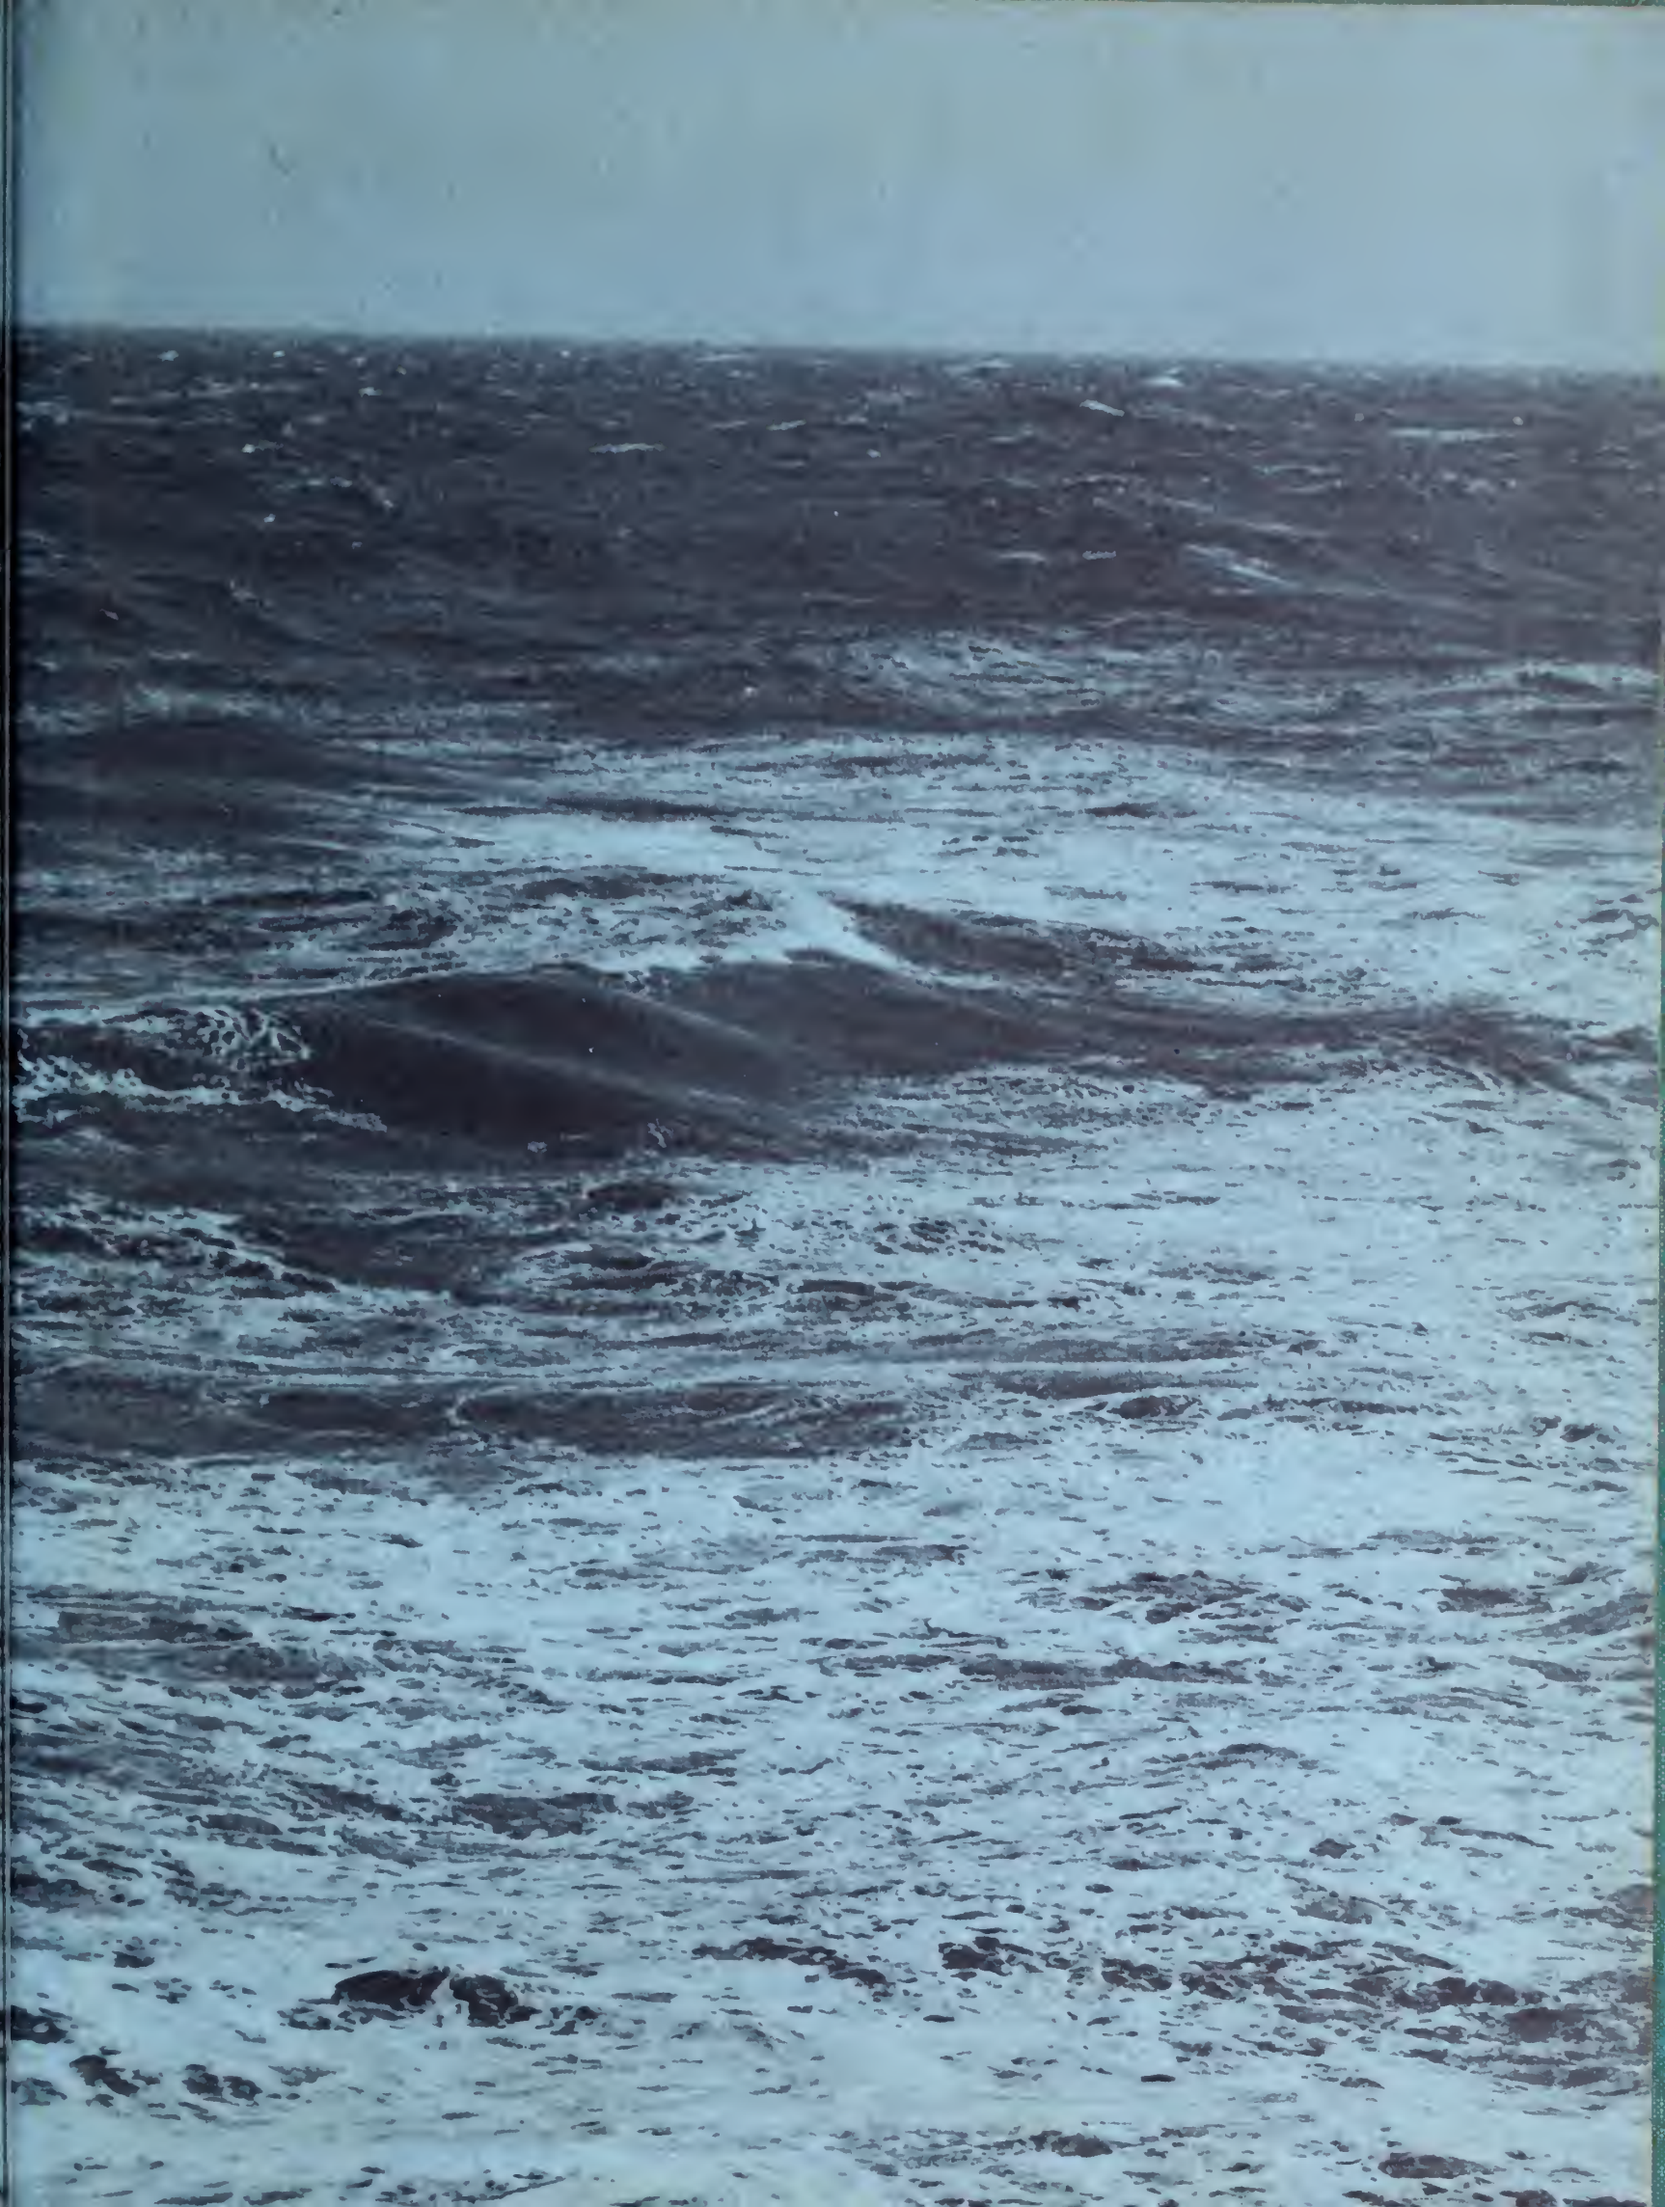
It's been pretty sweet this year. Remember the Holly Wreath Ball, Christmas time, all the fights and kisses, This has been a very bad year for grades but good for us.

all my love
Rusty

Remember Grant
Remember Lee
But most of all
Remember me.

Laura,

I don't see how I managed to get through Cox without your able assistance - College just won't be the same without you - you're the only person I know besides Carol and I that managed to survive both Gray's & Drake's classes - [mainly because you two are the only people I know who have had both classes with me]. Sincerely, I wish you the best of everything except for trouble [I'll probably monopolize that] and I hope you achieve your goal. [Be the best so I can say I knew you when] and please retain all that made you the envy of our little group [mainly: you always looked so nice, heat, cold, etc, never seemed to bother you = I was working up a real grudge against you for that]




Bonne Chance
